Experience of a Chicago Girl Who Had the Misfortune of Riding with a Deaf Father.

In one of the big office buildings downtown, says the Chicago Tribune, there is a dentist, who is known among his friends by the misfortune of his deafness and his characteristic failing for wheels. Next to extracting teeth and supplying gold crowns for his patients, there is nothing he enjoys better than a long wheel ride. On pleasant days his pretty daughter accompanies him and they ride tandem. The doctor prefers the tandem. Why this is so would be hard to explain, for his sent a gurleoola to the Philadelphia zoo. The little creature is one of the queerest creations in the animal kingdom, and just how to classify it is the problem. At first glance it greatly resembles a monkey, but many radical differences are soon apparent. The guricoola lives largely in trees, and it feeds on small birds. In this respect it differs from the monkey tribe, while another and very apparent difference is its anakelike tail, which is fully eight feet long. This remarkable ap-pendage, when not used in assisting its owner to travel, is carried in a neat, nauticallike coll. When the animal wants to climb a tree it shoots the coll out, larlot fashion, entches the nearest limb, and shins up its own tall with amazing rapidity. Once among the branches, another cast is made, and up goes the guricoola like a spider climbing his thread. So deft is the creature at lassoing that the tallest trees are ascended in a jiffy. and the absence of noise in the operation makes it easy to take the feathered tribe unawares. Ancient scientifle writers have casually mentioned the creature in helr works, but owing to the inaccessibility of the region whence they come, and the rapidity of the animal's movements, a study of the species has not much enriched natural history. The animal now in the zoo at Philadelphia is the first known specimen in captivity.

LIVE SNAKE FOR WAIST BELT.

The Peculiar Experience of a Young Woman on a Maryland

A singular but well-authenticated snake story comes from Pleasant Valley, Md., the principal actors in which were the snake and Miss Cora Legore. a domestic employed by Frederick G. Yingling, a well-known farmer residing near that place. Miss Legore went to the barn to milk the cows, as was her customary duty. She did not return as promptly as usual, and, becoming uneasy after a time, Mrs. Yingling sent some one to the barn to look for her. She was found lying in a dead faint in a cow stall, and upon being revived appeared dazed and frightened. Finally she became sufficiently composed to tell the cause of her unconsciousness. She said that while milking she felt something moving about her clothing, but supposed it was a cat, until she felt a constriction about her waist, and she found herself looking into the eyes of a snake which had wrapped itself about her and reared its head in front of her face. She was too much frightened to notice what sort of a serpent was thus confronting her, but, striking at it with her hand, fainted away. When she was found the snake had disappeared.

The reckless hoodlum who, astride of a wheel, went at break-neck pace along the crowded Sunday streets, knocking down men and women and frightening children, is now seldom seen.

Four years ago it was a common thing for a creature of this sort, and it was not always a man, either, to be the cause of several mishaps in a single day. Whether it was the exhilaration of being on a wheel or whether it was some subtle poison in the gum they chewed, these people ran amuck frequently, and it was not uncommon for as many as 50 to face the police judge Monday morning in answer to any charge from mayhem to murder. Drop a condied cherry or a small spoonful of jelly into the bottom of a punch glass and cover with the pineapple, when ready to serve, add a spoonful of whipped cream to each glass and put a candied cherry on top. Jelly may be sub-stituted for the cherries, and the glasses after being niled should be placed on ice for 20 minutes. For cherry snowballs, select large red and white charries, firm and ripe.

After stoning them, roll each one in a soft leing made of confectioners' augar and colored pink, for the white cherries, then roll them in freshly-grated eccounts. Place on ice for a short time before wanted. Strawberry charlotte requires slices

San Francisco Young Woman Will Try to Refine the Argonautant Name City.

Miss Janne M. Long, a resident of San Francisco and a graduate of the North-western university at Evanaton, Chicago's northern suburb, proposes to spend her summer vacation at Cape Nome and to give a series of entertainments there of higher order than is usually known in mining camps. Miss Long went to the Pacific coast a little over a year ago, where she enguged actively in educational work. Now she has been invited to the Nome camp by Capt. and Mrs. Howland, of Oakland, who have been succession mining, and she will make her home with them while in the north. "My attention was recently called by eastern connections to the fact that in all Bret Harte's literature about the mining camps there is no allusion to any form of entertainment above the dance hall level. I intend to ascertain whether the lower forms of amusement can retain educated patrons, even in the frontier and mining settlements, when something is offered that is thoroughly entertaining and amusing.
